THERE WAS OIL IN BUENA WELL

But it Was Hauled There at Midnight in Spring
Wagon

MANY POOR PEOPLE DUPED

Pittsburg Man Testified He Was Hired to Take Oil From Muncie

There was oil in the far famed and much disputed oil well at Buena Vista.

It has been sworn to by a Pittsburg man, who knows, because he helped to haul it there from Muncie in a spring wagon, and was one of the men who assisted in "salting" the well.

After three years of wonder on the part of the inhabitants of the little village of Buena Vista, nestled among the majestic hills of Franklin county there came to light one of the cleverest schemes ever perpetrated in the history of that community.

If we would go back to the spring of 1905 we would see in the faces of those hopeful citizens "the smile that won't come off," because through the many years of toil they had saved a few hard earned dollars and purchased stock in the Buena "oil well."

Suffice to say every one had confidence and great hope in the new enterprise (which was destined to make the little village and its people famous). The deacon of the little church there was selling stock to almost every one he met, and in good faith too.

If there were any who said they had no faith in the oil boom they were branded as "knockers" and were not considered worthy to live in the community which was fast bidding fair to come into prominence at last.

The Standard Oil company sent representatives to the field and wanted to purchase but the residents said "no; we knew some one would want to take from us what will make us a fortune."

Many a poor boy, who was picking blackberries and digging ginseng and trading it for stock in the well, laid at night and dreamed of future prosperity, when his labors would cease and he could take things easy.

In fact people sat up far into the night and discussed the great outlook in store for Buena. An imaginary railroad and a trolley line was built up Salt Creek and indeed everything looked bright.

Alas, one night while the villagers were gathered at the postoffice, figuring on how the stock would go, silently, there was a treacherous work going on at the edge of the village. The well was being "salted," according to the testimony of William E. Green, of Pittsburg.

The well was no good and it seems there were some who knew it, but the people were gathering daily, even leaving their plows in the furrows and neglecting their work, waiting to see the oil spout up, and something had to be done.

According to a sworn statement this week by Green, former liveryman, of Muncie, M. J. O'Connell came to his stable at Muncie, about the first of May, 1905, and asked him to haul a barrel of crude oil to Connersville the following week, which he agreed to do.

Mr. Green also testifies that on May 29th, H. J. Robinson came to his stable and brought a barrel of crude oil and told him to haul it to Connersville, where he would be met by Charlie Stone, all of which he did.

The witness claims that Stone met him on the north side of Connersville and he and Stone drove to Buena Vista that night, reaching the oil field about midnight, and that Stone told him on the way they were going to have an oil well if they had to make one.

When they reached the well O'Connell and two other men were there. The two men attached a rubber hose to the barrel and put the other end in the well, letting the oil run down

BIG MAIL HOUSE HAS BEEN INDICTED

Sears, Roebuck & Co. Face
Charge of Fraud in United States Court

The United States courts have indicted Sears, Roebuck & Co., the large mail order house for using the United States mails for fraudulent purposes. They must now answer in court, the same as any criminal. Uncle Sam is now busy protecting the public from deception and fraud through the advertising of such concerns.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. have been indicted on three counts. Much more evidence is already in the hands of the government officials.

IS BETTER TO GO TO CONNERSVILLE

To See Theatricals, Than go to
Indianapolis and Come Home
With Packages

Talk about enterprise, Connersville citizens have arranged to run special trains to their city next Tuesday night to see the great American actress, Mrs. Fiske. They secured this artiste only after they gave her a guarantee of $1000 for one performance. Many Rushville people are going and are buying tickets of Frank Lyons at the local I. & O. traction station.

One of our merchants complained today that so many people were going to Connersville each week to see shows, and thereby taking money out of the city. To sum it up in philosophical manner, it is probably better that the people who will see high class theatricals go to Connersville, leaving here after supper, than to go to Indianapolis as heretofore, and spend the day, and likewise a large sum of money shopping. There are no inducements for Rushville people to shop in Connersville as Rushville merchants offer as good and even a better variety of goods at a closer figure.

By common consent the most reliable census ever taken in China was that of 1812. This gives the figures as more than 332,000,000. In 1868 the population was estimated at nearly 468,000,000; but in 1881 it had fallen to 380,000,000. It is now about 30,000,000.

A herd of Burmese sacred cattle which Tom O'Connor, a stockman of Goliad, Tex, imported from India about two years ago, has done so well that the variety will soon be found upon many of the ranches of southwest Texas.

The Eclair, of Paris, released recently 10,000 toy balloons as an advertising scheme. One was found in Finland, it having traveled a distance of 1,211 miles.

EIGHTEEN NEW BABIES IN RUSH

Many Pretty Babies With as Many Pretty Names Born in October

ALL ARE WHITE BUT ONE

List of Names Does Not Include
Births in Rushville and Carthage

It is always interesting to know of the new babies in the community, to those interested in the future welfare of our country and also to those hunting a name for their own baby.

Dr. Frank H. Green, secretary of the Rush county Board of Health reports the following names of the babies born in Rush county during the month of October: Ruby Marie, parents Mr. and Mrs. Morgan McCorkle; Hazel Marie, parents Mr. and Mrs. Adam Hay; infant, not named, parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Macy; infant not named, parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert McMichael; Ruth, parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Billings; Vernon, parents Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Wills; Estell F., parents Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Derringer; Loraine, parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hanen; Andy, parents Mr. and Mrs. William Gardner; Francis, parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kassen; Helen G., parents Mr. and Mrs. Jesse D. Kennedy; Grace, parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Overman.

Of the eighteen babies reported, all are white but one, that of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Wills, of Richland township. As far as he has any record Dr. Green has reported all births, yet there may be families in the county who have babies born in October who have not reported same and if such be the case the parents are requested to report to the local secretary immediately.

The list of babies reported does not include Rushville and Carthage as these cities have a local board of health, which is not controlled by the county board.

VICTORS BAND TO BE HERE MONDAY

Royal Venetian Musicians Will Give Concert at Grand Theatre

Tickets are on sale at all of the drug stores for the Victor's Royal Venetian Band concert to be given Monday at 8:30 in the Grand theatre for the benefit of the high school library.

This organization is very fine in every respect and it will be a splendid entertainment and at the same time help build up the library for the high school. A library of helpful reference books is very essential to a school, so let the opera house be filled and a goodly sum will be spent for books which will be of use to the large high school and for many pupils in the future.

Joseph L. Cowing has heard the band in Philadelphia and says that the organization is one of the very best concert bands in the United States. No one will be disappointed in this concert and those who fail to attend will have cause for regret. Admission 25 cents. Secure tickets at the drug stores or of any of the solicitors.

HAYMAKERS AS MERRYMAKERS

Ridiculous Likeness of Husbandrymen of Many Years Ago

PARADE WAS A SUCCESS

Lodge Session, Initiation and Banquet Followed the Howling
Street March

"What in the world is all this noise and red fire about," said a man on the down town streets last night, "has Jim Watson been elected Governor already?"

It was the Haymakers' parade. Living caricatures of the sturdy husbandrymen of years ago who made Indiana famous and warranted the organization of a fraternal order to perpetuate their memory paraded the streets in Rushville, evoking much laughter and comment of a ludicrous nature. The parade preceded lodge services, comprising the initiation of a large class of candidates and followed by a banquet of royal dimensions.

The "Haymakers" were led by the peer of the group—an aged farmer with long flowing whiskers mixed with hayseed and chaff, a wide brim straw hat, overalls and high top boots. Many younger and livelier individuals, although it must be admitted the aged man often capered in a manner not becoming his age followed in the mirthful procession.

Connersville sent over about thirty "rubes" on a special car, and they had the time of their life.

A banquet was no mean affair, and, although the last of the evening of a substantial nature, was far from last.

FAST PACER BOUGHT BY HARRIE JONES

Successful Bidder at Madison Square Garden Horse
Sale Yesterday

Harrie Jones bought "Stilletto," a 2:12 pacer, at the Madison Square Garden horse sale yesterday, giving $1500 for the sensational pacer.

The horse was ill last year and was not campaigned, but the previous season showed much speed, finishing a close second in a race paced in 2:04.

Mr. Jones will probably bring home several horses from the sale. He is being asked on all sides by wealthy Easterners to take their horses and race them next season. Already he has one of the largest individual stables in the country.

ROAD SUPERVISORS TO BE ELECTED TUESDAY

One of the candidates for road supervisor has on his card, "The best that ever came down the pike." Township elections will occur next Tuesday, and in many parts of Rush county warm political battles are on.

NEARLY ALL WHITE HORSES IN FUNERAL PROCESSION

In the Wilhelm funeral procession this morning, out of fifteen horses hitched to vehicles, thirteen of them were white. The other three were furnished by the liverymen, two of them being hitched to the hearse.

CONGRESSMAN WATSON TO LEAVE FOR WASHINGTON

Much Pleased With His Candidacy After a Tour of the State

Congressman James E. Watson will leave Sunday for Washington. He will leave his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor in the hands of Secretary E. B. Thomas, Captain John K. Gowdy and other friends who are now busy perfecting a Watson organization. He is very much pleased with the outlook after making a whirlwind tour of the State in the interest of his candidacy.

FATHER DEAD AND SON DEAD DRUNK

Riley Wilhelm Found in a Helpless
State of Beastly
Intoxication

Yesterday afternoon City Marshal Price found Riley Wilhelm in a beastly state of intoxication at the I. & O. traction station, and had to haul him to the jail.

A sad feature of the affair was the fact that the young man's father had just died the previous night at his home in West Third street.

TWO OLD SCHOOLMATES MEET FIRST TIME IN YEARS

Dr. Sattler, of Chicago, Visiting
Henry Schattner in North
Main Street

Dr. Phillip Sattler, one of Chicago's most prominent physicians, is a guest of Henry Schattner in West Fifth street.

The physician and Mr. Schattner were schoolmates in the old country and had come over to America at the same time during the civil war. They had not seen each other in years until today.

BABY TROTTERS A GOOD INDUSTRY

Many Dollars Made in the Horse Business in Rush
County Every Year

GOOD PRICES IN NEW YORK

What Some of Our Drivers and Trainers Have in Their Winter Stables

There are more good high class harness horses in Rush county today than ever before in its history.

Scott Erannan is working ten head from two-year-olds with trials of 2:30 to Allacia, trial 2:09. Harrie Jones has twenty head of some of the best in the country. Riley Nebro has several good ones and Mike Kelley is wintering five head of good prospects. Clyde Nebro has three head with trials of 2:23; time 2:12. Olell Maple is working five head. He has one Raven Wilkes that this year, as a three-year-old, could go in 2:15; a four-year-old that could do 2:15; a two-year-old, with less than thirty days work, that can show a 2:40 gait, and a yearling trotter which is said to have gone a quarter in 40 seconds, and an 1 1/2 in 19 seconds. The last three named are by The Patchen Boy, 2:10 3/4, and all trotters.

Dick Wilson, one of the best reinsmen in the business, has nine head of Patchen Boys, with trials from 2:30 to 2:09 3/4; also Rema W., trial 2:09 3/4; Aileen Wilson 2:04 1/4. John Dagler has eight head with trials from 2:40 to 2:14.

George Weeks has Alex Williams, trial 2:14; Bessie V., trial 2:11, a Patchen Boy stud, trial in race of 2:13 1/4 over half mile track, and several good young things that can step fast.

There is Charles Carr, who has the fast green pacer Dollie Carr that Olell Maple worked the past season, with a trial of 2:11, that has the earmarks of a 2:10 pacer for next year. Roy Carr has a good three-year-old pacer.

Jerome Saup has a three-year-old pacer, trial 2:11, by Patchen Boy, and Arleigh O., trial 2:23, trotter by Raven Wilkes; both are fast and promising horses.

And there are a number of other good horses in Rush county that will bring both fame and money to the county.

A prominent local horseman, in summing up the business said today:

"Does it look like the horse industry is going backward or on the decline in the least? Look at Thursday's sale at Madison Square Garden, New York, where 170 head of light harness horses sold for a total of $151,551 or an average of $1295 per head. In that number were four yearlings that brought $1000, $1250, $1550 and $2550. Does it look like it pays to handle baby trotters, when they will bring such prices as they have been of late? There is no place in the world where there are better prospects than we have in Rush county and in Indiana. Rush county has produced the fastest half mile track mare in the world and perhaps the fastest over a mile course. Indiana has produced the fastest stallion in the world, and all that remains to make it a clean sweep is to produce the fastest gelding. I wonder how many have stopped to think of these great achievements of our county and State."

HUNTED IN THE WILDS OF SOUTHERN INDIANA

County Clerk Posey and Frank Bender returned last night from a four days' hunting trip in Southern Indiana. They killed over one hundred quail, and brought almost as many home with them. They hunted around Brown county, and Mr. Bender says it was so wild that he would not have been surprised to see a bear jump out at any time.

IS LOOSENING UP

Money Market Beging to Show Signs of Relaxing Again.

A CHEERFUL APPEARANCE

Has Been Given to the Entire Situation by Improvement in Tone of Financial Affairs.

Trade, However, Is Still Quiet Due Partly to Check Occasioned by Mild Weather.

New York, Nov. 30.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade today says: The improvement in the tone of financial affairs has become more widespread, so notable, indeed, as to give a much more cheerful appearance to the entire situation. For one thing, the security markets have displayed more evidences of healthy strength than for a long time past, the money market has shown signs of loosening up, the currency premium has dropped quite materially, close to the vanishing point, in fact, and the expectations are widely entertained or expressed that the country will be back upon a cash payment basis in a few weeks. But trade is still quiet the country over, and new buying, owing partly to holiday observances and also to mild weather which still is a check on retail trade, is small, while industrial operations are still being restricted. With the easing in the money situation has come a more liberal marketing of the country's products and grain receipts at interior markets and are certainly larger, part of which is due no doubt to the greater strength exhibited by cereals and cotton, which in turn primarily reflect the better feeling at money markets. The price situation as a whole, however, shows signs of readjustment to the changed conditions of demand, and live animals, provisions and meats and other food products have declined quite sharply. The labor situation also shows evidences of the slowing down of industrial operations. Railroad traffic is apparently smaller than for many weeks past and the car shortage evil has disappeared just as the close of water navigation approaches.

Collections are still very poor. While the banking situation is improving loans are not being made with any degree of freedom, and rates are still prohibitory. At the same time the systems of inland exchange seem to be again tending toward normal, although there is still much room for improvement in that respect.

ARMY RACE SPIRITED

Mounted Service Puts Crack Horses on the Track at Bennings.

Bennings, Nov. 30.—One of the most novel contests in the history of the Bennings course was decided yesterday afternoon when an even dozen enlisted men from troops of United States cavalry and batteries of the United States field artillery, mounted on the best horses of their several commands, met in the race for the army mounted service cup and a purse of $600. Gregg, the favorite, ridden by Saddler James G. McGrath of the Thirteenth cavalry, proved an easy winner. Dan, an eight-year-old, ridden by Sergeant Roy Miller of the Eleventh cavalry, set the pace to the turn into the home stretch when Gregg took command, and finished first by three lengths. The books were at first at sea in laying odds, with remarkable differences in prices, but finally settled on Gregg and Randolph as almost even choices. The cup is to be competed for annually.

Fireworks Plant Lets Go.

St. Louis, Nov. 30.—Every pane of glass within a radius of five blocks and houses in the vicinity were shaken when the fireworks plant of Louis Wolter at 5416 Virginia avenue was blown to atoms late yesterday. Six youths and two girls employed in the plant had almost miraculous escapes from death as the rockets and fireworks shot in the air in a fiery shower. The first explosion was a small one and gave the employees warning to get out of the building.

He Left a Note.

Goshen, Ind., Nov. 30.—Rev. William Galtton Parker, aged eighty-one, Christian minister, ended his life in the canal. He was seen by a woman on the opposite bank to wade in and let himself down by some willow twigs after laying his hat and overcoat on the bank. He hung by the willows and drowned himself in two feet of water. A note in his overcoat pocket said: "I have no ill feeling against anyone. I have full faith in God that He will accept me. I have been honest in my dealings all my life."

Guilty of Peonage.

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 30.—A jury in the United States court returned a verdict of guilty in the case of Thomas Graham and J. B. Graham, prominent naval stores operators of South Alabama, charged with holding Jim McCants, a negro, in peonage. The Grahams were charged with following the negro to May's turpentine camp at Florida and taking him back to Alabama, after a pitched battle with revolvers.

TESTIMONY ENDED

The Bradley Case Is Now in Its Final Stages.

Washington, Nov. 30.—"Oh, I am so glad it's all over at last." These words were uttered by Mrs. Annie M. Bradley, charged with the murder of former Senator Arthur M. Brown of Utah, as she, with a smile, was led from the courtroom to the prison van which was to take her back to jail. The presentation of evidence had just been concluded and court adjourned until this morning, when arguments began. Justice Stafford announced that an agreement had been reached among counsel for four hours of argument on each side. These will be completed Monday afternoon and Justice Stafford said he would then deliver the charge and give the case to the jury.

The testimony of the two government insanity experts, Dr. Edward H. Bruce of Baltimore and Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe of New York, was the feature of Friday's proceedings, both of these alienists declaring that there was nothing in the record of the case to indicate that Mrs. Bradley was insane. Counsel for the defense attempted to impeach the testimony of these experts by showing that they had been called for the government and that as a matter of course they were testifying in the interest of the government. Each of them repudiated this charge and declared that they would have testified to the insanity of Mrs. Bradley as readily as they testified to her sanity had they found her to be insane. They were questioned at length and both cited the acts of the defendant, testified to by witnesses as showing her to be sane. Rev. David H. Utter, pastor of the Unitarian church of Denver, Col., who in former testimony has been referred to as "the priest," was placed on the stand. He was Mrs. Bradley's pastor in Salt Lake city and testified to a conversation he had with her in 1905, she saying in effect, according to his testimony, that Senator Brown would marry her when a gun was placed before him, but the pastor added he did not understand that she proposed shooting him. He rather thought someone else would undertake to force him to marry her. Mrs. Bradley was recalled and stated that she had no recollection of such a conversation. The pastor occupied a seat at her side during most of the day and appeared to sympathize with her in her predicament.

Death to Terrorists.

Odessa, Nov. 30.—Since Monday of this week thirteen terrorists have been hanged here. The swift justice which is being meted out by the field courtsmartial is having an excellent effect on the disorderly element and is encouraging the police to a more fearless performance of their duty.

Took Advantage of Excitement.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 30.—Two convicts, S. D. Ware and Albert Bunch, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed a stockade at the state convict farm in Lincoln county. During the excitement three other convicts escaped.

Now Up to the Governor.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 30.—Lieutenant Governor Sherman has signed the house bill increasing the compensation of members of the general assembly $1,000 a year instead of $1,000 a term. The measure now is in the hands of Governor Deneen.

Victim of Live Wire.

Elkhart, Ind., Nov. 30.—W. A. Winans is dead, the result of an electric shock which was received at the power house of the Indiana & Michigan Electric company, where he came in contact with a live wire while climbing over a boiler.

On a Jury Hunt.

Boise, Ida., Nov. 30.—Sheriff Hodgins and deputies are scouring Ada county to fill the special venire ordered by Judge Wood in the Pettibone case.

Japanese Consul General Nosse, at Ottawa, has complained to the Dominion immigration department that a number of Japanese holding passports were not allowed to land at Victoria.

"This play is certainly too rank for me. I'm going to demand my money back."

"Wait until after the next act, Bill. Sixteen years elapse between acts 1 and 2, and you can demand interest on your money for that length of time."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

NATIONAL BANKS

Obtain Practically All the Allotments of the New Three Per Cents.

DEFINITE ANNOUNCEMENT

Secretary Cortelyou Makes Clear the Status of the Government's Recent Certificate Issue.

The People Will Pay For This Issue About Two-Thirds of a Cent Per Capita.

Washington, Nov. 30.—The final closing of allotments of the 3 per cent one-year certificates has been definitely announced by Secretary Cortelyou. He declared that no allotments had been made or would be made after his announcement of Wednesday night that no further subscriptions would be considered. The point was not quite clear until his final statement that some few allotments might not be made from subscriptions already in hand on Wednesday. As the matter stands, practically all the allotments are to national banks which have agreed to take out circulation and in the majority of cases have indicated a willingness to surrender the certificates before maturity upon payment of accrued interest on the date of redemption. Information was still withheld at the treasury as to the amount of the allotments made, but such information as is obtainable indicates that the total will not materially exceed $25,000,000. There appears to be no doubt that probably three-fifths of the amount allotted is subject to redemption with accrued interest within three months. On the basis of an issue of $25,000,000 this would amount to the redemption of $15,000,000 with interest to the amount of 1½ per cent, which would require $225,000 for the interest payments. If $10,000,000 of the certificates ran the full period of one year the interest payments at 3 per cent would consume $300,000. These two sums therefore, making a total of $525,000, would represent the entire cost of the issue of certificates to the treasury, outside the trifling incidental expenses of issue. This would be at the rate of about two-thirds of a cent per capita for the population of the United States.

The offers of the Panama 2 per cent bonds are still reaching the treasury in large numbers. They will remain unopened until this afternoon, when the receipt of subscription closes.

The treasury working balance according to the terms of deposit which have been officially announced will be increased about $11,250,000 when all the new securities are delivered. This represents 10 per cent of the amount of the Panama bonds and one-quarter of the amount of the one-year certificates. The balance Friday was reduced to less than $5,500,000, but this ignores the large fund of cash held against outstanding checks and other similar liabilities.

Internal revenue receipts have fallen off this month as compared with the same month a year ago, by about $4,065,000, and customs receipts by about $2,000,000. Part of this decrease is due to the difficulty of obtaining currency for making payments which would otherwise be made. Secretary Cortelyou continues to listen attentively to representations in regard to currency measures, but does not commit himself beyond the general necessity for intelligent legislation. One of these measures to be introduced will probably embody the views of George E. Roberts, president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago, who, with Comptroller Ridgeley, is among those who have recently become convinced that a central bank of issue is the best cure for monetary difficulties.

FIRST CONSIDERATION

Congress Will Lose No Time Tackling the Money Problem.

Washington, Nov. 30.—As the day for the opening of the sixtieth congress approaches it becomes more and more evident that the financial question will receive first consideration at the hands of that body. A number of informal conferences have already been held and more must be held before anything like a program can be announced. Senator Aldrich, chairman of the senate committee on finance, which committee will have to deal with the question for the senate, is expected in the city today to take up the question with some of the leaders, including Senator Allison and Speaker Cannon, who are now here.

Train Proceeded Slowly.

Penza, European Russia, Nov. 30.—The police of Ufa were alarmed last night owing to a report that an attempt would be made to blow up the train bearing Secretary Taft and his party toward St. Petersburg, and fifty soldiers were stationed in the corridors and vestibules of the cars at Ufa and remained on guard until morning. The train proceeded slowly and with great caution throughout the night.

To Punish the Arabs.

Paris, Nov. 30.—The cabinet has decided to give General Bailloud, commanding the French troops in Algeria, an absolutely free hand to end the invasion by tribesmen of the frontier of Algeria and punish the Arabs.

TWO SETS OF RECEIVERS

State and Federal Authorities in Conflict in New York.

New York, Nov. 30.—Supreme Court Justice Seabury, on motion of Attorney General Jackson, has appointed Paul Fuller, Melville G. Palliser and J. Hampden Dougherty receivers for the New York City railway and for the Metropolitan Street railway. This action of Justice Seabury may precipitate a conflict of authority between the state and federal officials over control of the lines of the Metropolitan system, which are already in charge of Adrian Joline and Douglas Robinson, appointees of the United States court. Mr. Fuller is the attorney who brought the original action against the Metropolitan Securities company, the holding company, and which proceedings were followed by the appointment by Justice Lacombe in the United States court of receivers for both the New York railway and the Metropolitan Street railway. Attorney General Jackson attacked this receivership and argued that the federal appointment was in the nature of conclusive action. In granting the plea Justice Seabury directed the receivers named by him to apply to the federal court on behalf of the state court to relinquish its control over the property involved. The court, however, pointed out that the federal receivership was not under criticism and that both the federal and state actions had been properly brought. The Metropolitan Street Railway company controls practically all of the surface traction lines in Manhattan and the Bronx.

THE POWERS CASE

Defense Willing to Admit Whence Sped the Fatal Bullet.

Georgetown, Ky., Nov. 30.—The defense in the Powers trial sought to mitigate the effect of the testimony as to the place from which was fired the shot which killed William Goebel, by a statement to the effect that while not wishing to curtail the volume of testimony to be introduced by the prosecution, yet, to save time to the court, the defense would be willing to admit that the fatal shot was fired from the office of the secretary of state; admit that the bullet lodged in the hackberry tree; admit the nature of the wound, and that Goebel died of it.

R. H. Berryman, the third witness introduced, was an eye-witness of the tragedy, and his testimony was the sensation of the day's proceedings. The witness said he was entering the statehouse grounds when he saw Senator Goebel and Colonel Jack Chinn walking a short distance in front of him. He heard a shot which he said apparently came from the window of the secretary of state's office. Goebel, the witness said, sank slowly to the ground and finally reclined on his back. The clothing worn by Goebel when he was shot was brought into court for identification by Dr. Thos. R. Welch, the fourth witness of the day.

Walsh Scores Strong Point.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Another effort to get before the jury the personal accounts of John R. Walsh, the former president of the Chicago National bank, who is on trial charged with misapplying funds, failed in the United States district court. After an argument lasting several hours Judge Anderson again ruled against the contentions of the government attorneys, declaring that to allow B. B. McKay, Walsh's private bookkeeper, to testify about the defendant's personal checks would put Walsh in the position of testifying against himself.

No Details at Hand.

Lalla Maghnia, Algeria, Nov. 30.—A serious engagement is reported to have occurred between the French troops and the Benis Nassen tribesmen at Adjeroudkiss. No details have been received here.

Took Secret Vengeance.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 30.—Trinidad Vasquez, a secret service officer in the employment of the Mexican government, chief witness for the government in the cases of Magon, Villareal and Rivera, alleged revolutionists, was poisoned yesterday. Vasquez was said to have been in daily fear of being killed since he arrived here Monday.

Attorney Held to Answer.

Warsaw, Ind., Nov. 30.—Two charges alleging embezzlement have been filed in the Kosciuszko circuit court against Jack Graves, attorney, by the Ryan Harvester company. The defendant furnished bond in $2,500 for appearance when called for trial. It is reported that other arrests will follow.

He Had the Name.

She had gone up the scales once, and then she had gone down the scales. Then she had done the same thing over again, after which some one asked:

"In what school of music were you taught?"

Thereupon some one else interrupted in an undertone:

"Judging by the speed, I should say it was a riding school."

And there were many present who deemed the sentiment a good one.

Fair Share.

It was at a theater in Manchester. The king, aged and infirm, was blessed with two sons. He was pacing up and down the stage, with a worried, troubled look, exclaiming aloud, "On which of these my sons shall I bestow my crown?" Immediately came a voice from the gallery, "Why not 'arf a crown apiece, guv'nor?"—London Mail.

"We have captured fourteen," another announced, "and there may be more out yonder in the brush."

Glenister noted with growing surprise that not one of the prisoners lined up beneath the glaring torches wore the army blue. They were miners all, or thugs and ruffians gathered from the camp. Where, he wondered, were the soldiers.

"Beware the next blast!"

"Didn't you have troops from the barracks to help you?" he asked.

"Not a troop. We haven't seen a soldier since we went to work."

At this the young leader became alarmed. Had this whole attack miscarried? Had this been no clash with the United States forces, after all? If so, the news would never reach Washington, and instead of accomplishing his end, he and his friends had thrust themselves into the realms of outlawry, where the soldiers could be employed against them with impunity, where prices would rest upon their heads. Innocent blood had been shed, court property destroyed. McNamara had them where he wanted them at last. They were at bay.

The unwounded prisoners were taken to the boundaries of the Midas and released with such warnings as the imagination of Dexty could conjure up. Then Glenister assembled his men, speaking to them plainly:

"Boys, this is no victory. In fact, we're worse off than we were before, and our biggest fight is coming. There's a chance to get away now before daylight and before we're recognized, but if we're seen here at sunup we'll have to stay and fight. Soldiers will be sent against us, but if we hold out, and the struggle is fierce enough, it may reach to Washington. This will be a different kind of fighting now, though. It will be warfare pure and simple. How many of you will stick?"

"All of us," said they in unison, and, accordingly, preparations for a siege were begun. Barricades were built, ruins removed, buildings transformed into blockhouses, and all through the turbulent night the tired men labored still ready to drop, led always by the young giant, who seemed without fatigue.

It was perhaps four hours after midnight when a man sought him out.

"Somebody's callin' you on the assay office telephone—says it's life or death."

Glenister hurried to the building, which had escaped the shock of the explosions, and, taking down the receiver, was answered by Cherry Malotte.

"Thank God, you're safe!" she began. "The men have just come in and the whole town is awake over the riot. They say you've killed ten people in the fight. Is it true?"

He explained to her briefly that all was well, but she broke in:

"Wait, wait! McNamara has called for troops and you'll all be shot. Oh, what a terrible night it has been! I haven't been to bed. I'm going mad. Now, listen carefully: Yesterday Helen went with Struve to the Sign of the Sled and she hasn't come back."

The man at the end of the wire cried out at this, then choked back his words to hear what followed. His free hand began making strange, futile motions as though he traced patterns in the air.

"I can't raise the roadhouse on the wire and—something dreadful has happened I know."

"What made her go?" he shouted.

"To save you," came Cherry's faint reply. "If you love her, ride fast to the Sign of the Sled or you'll be too late. The Bronco Kid has gone there!"

At that name Roy crashed the instrument to its hook and burst out of the shanty, calling loudly to his men.

"What's up?"

"Where are you going?"

"To the Sign of the Sled," he panted. "We've stood by you, Glenister, and you can't quit us like this," said one angrily. "The trail to town is good, and we'll take it if you do." Roy saw they feared he was deserting, feared that he had heard some alarming rumor of which they did not know.

"We'll let the mine go, boys, for I can't ask you to do what I refuse to do myself, and yet it's not fear that's sending me. There's a woman in danger, and I must go. She courted ruin to save us all, risked her honor to try and right a wrong—and I'm afraid of what has happened while we were fighting here. I don't ask you to stay till I come back—it wouldn't be square, and you'd better go while you have a chance. As for me—I gave up the old claim once—I can do it again." He swung himself to the horse's back, settled into the saddle and rode out through the lane of belted men.

CHAPTER XX

As Helen and her companion ascended the mountain, scared and swept by the tempest of the previous night, they heard, far below, the swollen torrent brawling in its boulder ridden bed, while behind them the angry ocean spread southward to a blood red horizon. Ahead, the bleak mountains brooded over forbidding valleys; to the west a suffused sun glared sullenly, painting the high piled clouds with the gorgeous hues of a stormy sunset. To Helen the wild scene seemed dyed with the colors of flame and blood and steel.

"That rain raised the dence with the trails," said Struve, as they picked their way past an insightly "slip" whence a part of the overhanging mountain, loosened by the deluge, had slid into the gulch. "Another storm like that would wash out these roads completely."

Even in the daylight it was no easy task to avoid these danger spots, for the horses floundered on the muddy soil. Vaguely the girl wondered how she would find her way back in the darkness, as she had planned. She said little as they approached the roadhouse, for the thoughts within her brain had begun to clamor too wildly, but Struve, more arrogant than ever before, more terrifyingly sure of himself, was loudly garrulous. As they drew nearer and nearer, the dread that possessed the girl became of paralyzing intensity. If she should fail—but she vowed she would not, could not, fail.

They rounded a bend and saw the Sign of the Sled cradled below them where the trail dipped to a stream which tumbled from the comb above into the river twisting like a silver thread through the distant valley. A peeled flagpole topped by a spruce bough stood in front of the tavern, while over the door hung a sled suspended from a beam. The house itself was a quaint structure, rambling and amorphous, from whose sod roof sprang blooming flowers and whose high banked walls were pierced here and there with sleepy windows. It had been built by a homesick foreigner of unknown nationality whom the army of "mushers" who paid for his clean and orderly hospitality had dubbed duly and as a matter of course a "Swede." When travel had changed to the river trail, leaving the house lonesome and high as though left by a receding wave, Struve had taken it over on a debt and now ran it for the convenience of a slender traffic, mainly stampedeers, who chose the higher route toward the interior. His hiring spent the idle hours in prospecting a hungry quartz lead and in doing assessment work on nearby claims.

Shortz took the horses and answered his employer's questions curtly, flashing a curious look at Helen. Under other conditions the girl would have been delighted with the place, for this was the quaintest spot she had found in the north country. The main room held bar and gold scales, a rude table and a huge iron heater, while its walls and ceiling were sheeted with white cloth so cunningly stitched and tacked that it seemed a cavern hollowed from chalk. It was filled with trophies of the hills—stuffed birds and animals, skins and antlers—from which depended in careless confusion dog harness, snowshoes, guns and articles of clothing. A door to the left led into the bunk room, where travelers had been wont to sleep in tiers three deep. To the rear was a kitchen and cache, to the right a compartment which Struve called the art gallery. Here free reign had been allowed the original owner's artistic fancies, and he had covered the place with pictures clipped from gazettes of questionable repute till it was a bewildering arrangement of pink ladies in tights, pugilists in scanty trunks, prize bulldogs and other less moral characters of the sporting world.

"This is probably the worst company you ever in," Struve observed to Helen with a forced attempt at lightness.

"Are there no guests here?" she asked him, her anxiety very near the surface.

"Travel is light at this time of the year. They'll come in later perhaps."

A fire was burning in this pink room where the landlord had begun spreading the table for two, and its warmth was grateful to the girl. Her companion, thoroughly at his ease, stretched himself on a fur covered couch and smoked.

"Let me see the papers now, Mr. Struve," she began, but he put her off. "No, not now. Business must wait on our dinner. Don't spoil our little party, for there's time enough and to spare."

She arose and went to the window, unable to sit still. Looking down the narrow gulch, she saw that the mountains beyond were indistinct, for it was growing dark rapidly. Dense clouds had rolled up from the east. A raindrop struck the glass before her eyes, then another and another, and the hills grew misty behind the coming shower. A traveler with a pack on his back hurried around the corner of the building and past her to the door. At his knock Struve, who had been watching Helen through half shut eyes, arose and went into the other room.

"Thank heaven, some one has come!" she thought. The voices were deadened to a hum by the sod walls till that of the stranger raised itself in such indignant protest that she distinguished his words.

"Oh, I've got money to pay my way! I'm no deadhead."

Shortz mumbled something back.

"I don't care if you are closed. I'm tired, and there's a storm coming."

This time she heard the landlord's refusal and the miner's angry profanity. A moment later she saw the traveler plodding up the trail toward town. "What does that mean?" she inquired as the lawyer re-entered.

"Oh, that fellow is a tough, and Shortz wouldn't let him in. He's careful whom he entertains, there are so many bad men roaming the hills."

The German came in shortly to light the lamp, and, although she asked no further questions, Helen's uneasiness increased. She half listened to the stories with which Struve tried to entertain her and ate little of the excellent meal that was shortly served to them. Struve meanwhile ate and drank almost greedily, and the shadowy, sinister evening crept along. A strange cowardice had suddenly overtaken the girl, and if at this late hour she could have withdrawn she would have done so gladly and gone forth to meet the violence of the tempest. But she had gone too far for retreat, and, realizing that for the present apparent compliance was her wisest resource, she sat quiet, answering the man with cool words while his eyes grew brighter, his skin more flushed, his speech more rapid. He talked incessantly and with feverish glee, smoking numberless cigarettes and apparently unconscious of the flight of time. At last he broke off suddenly and consulted his watch, while Helen remembered that she had not heard Shortz in the kitchen for a long time. Suddenly Struve smiled on her peculiarly, with confident cunning. As he leered at her over the disorder between them he took from his pocket a flat bundle, which he tossed to her.

"Now for the bargain, eh?"

"Ask the man to remove these dishes," she said as she undid the parcel with clumsy fingers.

"I sent him away two hours ago," said Struve, arising as if to come to her. She shrank back, but he only leaned across, gathered up the four corners of the tablecloth and, twisting them together, carried the whole thing out, the dishes crashing and jangling as he threw his burden recklessly into the kitchen. Then he returned and stood with his back to the stove, staring at her while she perused the contents of the papers, which were more voluminous than she had supposed.

For a long time the girl pored over the documents. The purport of the papers was only too obvious, and as she read the proof of her uncle's guilt stood out clear and damning. There was no possibility of mistake. The whole wretched plot stood out plain, its darkest infamies revealed.

In spite of the cruelty of her disillusionment Helen was nevertheless exalted with the fierce ecstasy of power, with the knowledge that justice would at last be rendered. It would be her triumph and her exaltation that she, who had been the unwitting tool of this miserable scheme, would be the one through whom restitution was made. She arose with her eyes gleaming and lips set.

"It is here."

"Of course it is. Enough to convict us all. It means the penitentiary for your precious uncle and your lover." He stretched his chin upward at the mention as though to free his throat from an invisible clutch. "Yes, your lover particularly, for he's the real one. That's why I brought you here. He'll marry you, but I'll be the best man." The timbre of his voice was unpleasant.

"Come, let us go," she said.

"Go," he chuckled mirthlessly. "That's a fine example of unconscious humor."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, first, no human being could find his way down to the coast in this tempest; second—but, by the way, let me explain something in those papers while I think of it." He spoke casually and stepped forward, reaching for the package, which she was about to give up, when something prompted her to snatch it behind her back, and it was well she did, for his hand was but a few inches away. He was no match for her quickness, however, and she glided around the table, thrusting the papers into the front of her dress. The sudden contact with Cherry's revolver gave her a certain comfort. She spoke now with determination.

"I intend to leave here at once. Will you bring my horse? Very well, I shall do it myself."

She turned, but his indolence vanished like a flash, and, springing in front of the door, he barred her way.

"Hold on, lady. You ought to understand without my saying any more. Why did I bring you here? Why did I plan this little party? Why did I send that man away? Just to give you the proof of my complicity in a crime, I suppose. Well, hardly. You won't leave here tonight. And when you do you won't carry those papers. My own safety depends on that, and I am selfish, so don't get me started. Listen!" They caught the wail of the night crying as though hungry for sacrifice. "No, you'll stay here and—"

BOILING clothes or rubbing them? Boiling is much easier for the back and far better for the clothes. The surest—the only way to make your washing like snow is to boil them with

Maple City Self Washing Soap

Then why does the naphtha soap man try to keep you from boiling clothes? Simply because his soap is not good in hot water. Heat always evaporates the naphtha leaving you only a lump of fat to wash with. Maple City Soap works as well with cold water as any soap, and better still with boiling. It destroys every germ of uncleanness and makes the clothes healthful as well as perfectly clean. It is absolutely without a rival for washing windows, woodwork, china, silver and tinware. RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 30, 1907.

The Republican national committee will meet in Washington in a few days in order to select the place and fix the time for holding the convention to nominate candidates for president and vice-president next summer. It is expected that a date early in June will be decided upon. Eight cities are formally in the field for the honor to entertain the great gathering of the Grand Old Party. Chicago is apparently the favorite in the race provided a hall sufficiently large can be provided. Kansas City which already has a hall accommodating 23,000 people is second in popularity. Unless all signs fail, the real fight will be between Chicago and Kansas City, as the East has apparently no chance of landing the convention.

The law makers of the new State of Oklahoma will meet Monday in response to call by Gov. Haskell. While enough work has been laid out by the constitution to keep the legislature busy during practically its entire session, it is certain that a host of other measures will be presented. Probably one of the first of these will be a "Jim Crow" law, providing separate coaches for negroes, which was left out of the constitution only because of a fear that its inclusion would render the document unacceptable to President Roosevelt. The question of the permanent location of the State's capital will also doubtless occupy considerable time during the session, although it is generally believed that Guthrie will be able to hold its own against rival cities.

A Chicago Woman's Club is trying to inaugurate a sort of denatured Christmas—a holiday with the "evil" of gift giving eliminated—in other words, a

'giftless Christmas.' One woman said: "I have come to believe that the whole custom of 'giving' at Christmas is pernicious and has no excuse for being—that human society must eventually rid itself of an excrescence which has grown out of a celebration once beautiful and appropriate, but which has almost entirely lost its original significance and value."

"The extravagance of women," said another woman, "is one of the things that is causing the financial stringency in America. Our men are too liberal. They don't spend on themselves. But look at the bills of the average debutant—the girl just coming into society! It is impossible for the man of the family, usually, to keep things up without a strain. It's a vicious circle of conditions."

There is a great deal of truth in what these ladies say. The great trouble is some people overdo the matter, and as a consequence they go broke about Christmas time and they are not able to meet their just obligations. However, if these ladies want to undertake the job of abolishing the custom of giving on Christmas they will have a mighty big task on their hands. The diatribes against the Christmas habit lack the charm of novelty, but perhaps if accompanied by concerted action they may start a mighty movement of revolt. Once publicly committed to work of reformation it is not so difficult to proceed, and we may expect that this assertion of independent thought will be followed by equally independent action which eventually will bring about the desired results. Nothing should disturb the serenity of a giftless Christmas when one is perfectly sincere and lives up to convictions and professions.

under the division of profits favored by the Southern Indiana. The complainant prays that the railroad commission fix a fair and just basis for dividing the profits.

The bulk of the state printing contract for the next two years was awarded to the William B. Burford company, which has had it for the last twenty years. Under a new plan the contract was subdivided. Burford was lower on all subdivisions except the one for supplying stationery. On this one, however, all bids were rejected on the ground that they were too high. Burford's total bids aggregated about $100,000 for two years. Harry Slough, clerk of the printing board, estimates that the bids this year are 10 per cent lower than they were two years ago. The principal competitors for the contracts were Burford, the Sentinel Printing company and the Thornton-Levey company.

The Democratic state committee will be reorganized here on Jan. 8, at a meeting to be held at the Grand hotel. Unless conditions change, U. S. Jackson of Greenfield will then receive the support of the Taggart following for the state chairmanship. The anti-Taggart element will more than likely back James Kirby Risk of Lafayette, who has announced that he proposes to make a finish fight. The district conventions to elect new members of the state committee will be held on Jan. 2. Chairman O'Brien declares that he is not a candidate for re-election. He is anxious to retire from the leadership of the party.

At a mass meeting of citizens of Anderson that filled the Madison county circuit court room last night, Carroll K. McCullough formally announced his candidacy for the nomination for governor of Indiana on the Democratic ticket. The meeting was presided over by Thomas Baget, president of the metropolitan police board.

The court house clock ought to be ashamed to show its face, the way it keeps time.

RESURRECTION.
WAY, away, ghost of my dead desire,
Stir not again the ashes in my breast,
Of all my loves I had made one great fire
And burned thine image even as the rest!

Now from his grave love casts the covering,
And once again there rises through the night,
Like sudden water from a perished spring,
The murdered music of my slain delight!
—George Sylvester Viereck.

TURN OF THE YEAR.
THIS is the time when bit by bit
The days begin to lengthen sweet
And every minute gained is joy—
And love stirs in the heart of a boy.

THIS is the time the sun, of late
Content to lie abed till eight,
Lifts up betimes his sleepy head—
And love stirs in the heart of a maid.

THIS is the time we dock the night
Of a whole hour of candlelight;
When song of linnet and thrush is heard—
And love stirs in the heart of a bird.

THIS is the time when sword blades
With gold and purple damascene,
Pierce the brown crocus bed a-row—
And love stirs in a heart I know.
—Katherine Tynan Hinkson.

Young America Called Down.
It is believed that the pope of Rome had a particular filial irreverence in mind when he declared, as is alleged, that the "excessive liberty granted to young people in America may lead to unpleasant results." The remark could have been made without grave danger of wounding our national self love, because there is a very formidable public sentiment in this country drifting toward the same conclusion. We used to be proud of the so called freedom given to the youth of both sexes, and to all fears expressed by European observers that unpleasant results would follow it was our custom to observe that "our girls know how to take care of themselves." We are not so sure about that now, and while we still pin our faith on the ability of our boys to look after themselves we have learned by bitter experience that, coupled with this sense of initiative, there has been a loss of that respect for one's elders which is part of the charm of European society.

Undoubtedly great benefits have accrued to the country by training our boys and girls to be self reliant, but there is a reverse to the medal on its social side. We teach our children in the cradle to depend upon themselves, and they finish by making themselves the masters while yet the parents are alive. The tyranny of the young has got to be a national evil, and something must be done to restore the natural relation between the young and the old, between children and their parents.

A hopeful sign is that Americans are beginning to understand that we must go back over some parts of the road, all parts of which we have traveled so fast. We might as well begin by acknowledging that we will have to fall back upon those two pillars of the European social structure—the chaperon and the family curfew.

City Problems.
The Hon. Brand Whitlock, who has enough backing at the polls to keep him on the job as mayor of Toledo, recently contributed to the Circle a suggestive paper upon American cities. Striking at the root of the problems that vex our great municipalities, Mr. Whitlock virtually says that the cities of the United States merely "happen" and are not created and that their civic rottenness comes from their not being self ruled. To quote:

The framers of the constitution, who were the organizers, did the best they could, and wondrous well; but the modern city with its modern problems had not been dreamed of. Thus it happens that today the city is but an arm of the state. Legally it has no powers that are not granted to it by the state legislature; hence it is ruled by the state legislature. And as there are generally about two countrymen to one city man in every state legislature it follows that the cities are, in reality, governed by men who know nothing about cities and care nothing for them—men who view the city possibly with contempt, certainly with suspicion and distrust. And, primarily, that is what is the matter with the city.

When all has been said the preachers and sociologists agree that great cities have to be, and the mayor of Toledo thinks that the ideal city is not an impossible proposition. The city system must be reformed and the reform of the men in control will follow. He thinks that Des Moines has improved upon the Galveston plan of government by commission, but even the Des Moines plan falls short of true democracy. Mr. Whitlock's ideal for municipal reform is worthy of the attention of communities which are not yet in the front rank of cities. His plan provides for the abolition of ward units, a small council board, nonpartisan nominations and elections, the initiative and referendum, the recall, the merit system for all employees and strictly home rule on all subjects of a purely local nature.

The counterfeiter who excused himself for making spurious dollars by saying that he needed the money to build a balloon did not seek so much to inflate currency as to secure currency for inflation.

At the rate the boys are arriving at the home of Germany's crown prince that country need not worry about a shortage of emperors for some time to come.

Hoarding of Money Unpatriotic and Unwise.

By Secretary of the Treasury CORTELYOU.

IT IS A TIME WHEN EVERY CITIZEN SHOULD ASSUME HIS SHARE OF THE BURDEN. THE HOARDING OF MONEY, THE EXACTION OF UNNECESSARILY HARSH REQUIREMENTS IN BUSINESS DEALINGS, BUT RETARD OUR RETURN TO NORMAL CONDITIONS. THE HOARDED MONEY SHOULD BE PUT BACK IN THE BANKS, AND THE EXACTIONS OF BANKERS AND MERCHANTS SHOULD BE PROPORTIONED ONLY TO ACTUAL BUSINESS NECESSITIES. TO DO OTHERWISE IS NOT ONLY UNPATRIOTIC, BUT UNWISE.

I believe that if this money of the country, wherever hoarded, were at once put back to FULFILL ITS FUNCTIONS IN THE CHANNELS OF TRADE there would be within twenty-four hours an almost complete resumption of business operations.

I doubt whether we can in any way estimate the loss that has fallen upon those who have, either through SELFISH OR MISGUIDED MOTIVES, thus drawn their money from places of MORE THAN REASONABLE SAFETY to put it where it has been lost through robbery or fire or other misfortune.

The various plans advocated for currency reform must be subjected to RIGID scrutiny, to the end that the citizens of every section shall be fairly treated, their needs and requirements consulted and, above all, that whatever action is finally taken it shall be so SOUND AND WHOLESOME as to enhance our commercial standing among the nations of the world.

As a people we have this and many other grave problems before us. Their solution will not be a thing of a month or a year. We must approach them with the determination to exercise DISPASSIONATE JUDGMENT and to seek as our ultimate aim justice as between man and man.

No place in the world affords a better place to study human nature. And for fitting himself to preach to men and women, he can find more material and texts in these real human tragedies—and occasional comedies—than in calling on all the parishioners in the vicinity. It is time more profitably spent.

When Dr. Tevis was in Seymour several years ago, he flayed the saloon men and gamblers with a mighty whip hand, and after the order of the unique and unexpected "stunts" which he is ever doing, he had the nerve to send them a personal invitation to attend the revival services. Such an odd request made a "hit" with them, and they lined up to a man, many of them closing up their places of business to attend the meeting.

"Bring those fellows right down here," said the pastor when he saw that they called his bluff and were coming in the rear entrance of the church and looking around for back seats. "I want to have them here where I can give them a good scorching," continued Dr. Tevis, and the ushers brought the fellows forward while the congregation snickered, and the "bunch" colored a flaming red with embarrassment.

The frank manner in which he dealt with them bore good fruit, for several afterwards joined church.

When he was leaving Seymour he was surprised to receive a fine, marble top table, a gift from the saloon men and gamblers of the city. On a card was written the names of the fellows who "liked that fellow's gall" and at the bottom appeared the named of "Jack Pott." Dr. Tevis knew all the other men, but to save his life could not recall meeting or hearing of any such fellow named Jack Pott. Before leaving he called on Dal Tyler, now a wealthy saloonist of Indianapolis, and told him he wanted to thank the "boys" and incidentally he inquired "Who in the world is this Jack Pott?"

"Well," said Tyler, "when we went to buy the table, we found we were sixty cents short, and so we all chipped in a nickle each and made up what is known in the parlance of poker players, a 'jack pot.'"

A large family Bible now rests on the table in Dr. Tevis' home.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Ind., November 30.—The executive committee of the Republican State Editorial association met at the Claypool hotel last night and decided to hold the annual winter meeting there Jan. 16 and 17. W. K. Penrod, Logansport; Frank T. Singleton, Martinsville; R. S. Truitt, Noblesville; Edward Hancock, Brookville; Carl Riddick, Winamac; Harry Strohm, Kentland; and Harry Smith, Greencastle, attended the meeting. George B. Lockwood's resignation as chairman of the press bureau of the state committee was accepted. He was succeeded by William Craig, Noblesville. The editors gave Mr. Lockwood a vote of thanks for his long and faithful service. Vice President Fairbanks probably will be invited to deliver an address at the winter meeting.

The Southern Indiana Railroad company is displeased with the conduct of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, and has filed a complaint against the B. & O. S. W. with the railroad commission. The Southern Indiana alleges that the B. & O. S. W. refuses to take money. The Southern Indiana alleges that a joint rate has been charged on the shipment of coal from Linton, on the Southern Indiana, to Lehman, on the B. & O. S. W. This joint rate, as ordered by the railroad commission, on the complaint of the United States Cement company, at Lehman, is 50 cents a ton. The Southern Indiana, in its complaint, alleges that it has charged this rate and has turned a fair proportion of the money over to the B. & O. S. W. The B. & O. S. W. officials, the complaint says, refuse to receive this proportion, and have served notice that the B. & O. S. W. will deliver no coal to Lehman.

PARIS IN 1869.

Never Had the Empire Seemed More Assured, the Court More Brilliant. The last flicker of the candle, the last flame of the dying fire, is ever the brightest, and so it was with Paris in 1869.

Never had the empire seemed more assured, the court more brilliant, the fetes more gorgeous. The light hearted Parisians revelled in the daily sights of royal processions and cavalcades. The Bois de Boulogne and the Champs Elysees, where we were living at that time, were crowded with splendid equipages. I remember often seeing the Empress Eugenie, then the handsomest woman in Europe, driving in her daumont, the green and gold liveries of the postillions and outriders making a brave show. Nor were four horses and postillions the privilege of royalty alone. Princess Metternich, the wife of the Austrian ambassador, often went out in similar style. The beautiful Mme. de Canisy and the Duchesse de Mouchy, the empress' greatest and perhaps only intimate friend, and a host of court ladies habitually drove out in great state and helped by the magnificence of their appearance to give to Paris that air of elegance and distinction which could neither be surpassed nor emulated by any other capital in Europe. Even among those who had forebodings of the gathering storm no one had deserted the black shadow cast on the blue sky by the approaching figure of Bellona, her fierce eyes fixed on Lappy, smiling, tranquil France.—Lady Randolph Churchill in Century.

QUITE A NICE GAME.

Why the Girl Who Proposed It Lost Her Temper.

The other day Miss Fannie Lomer ran across the road to see an intimate friend. As is usual with young ladies, they had a good deal to tell one another. In the course of the conversation Fannie said:

"I used to think that Gus Simpson was a nice young man, but I just hate him now."

"Why, what has he done?"

"He's treated me shamefully."

"In what way?"

"Why, the other evening at a party I said to him: 'Let's play the old game of temptation. If I say "Yes" or "No" to your questions, I'll owe you a box of gloves, and if you say "Yes" or "No" you'll give me a box.'"

"Then what?"

"Well, after the party he took me home, and all the way there he talked as sweetly as could be about love and that men should not live alone, and all that. And when we got to the front gate he said, 'Fannie, I have waited for this opportunity a long time—will you marry me?' I whispered 'Yes' in a low voice, and"—(Here her sobs choked her voice).

"And what did he do then?" inquired her listener eagerly.

"He—just—chuckled and said, 'You have lost, Fannie; I take No. 9's,' then laughed with all his might. That's what he did."—London Answers.

Amusements

George Ansted and Otto Billan, of Connersville, were here yesterday doing advance work for the Mrs. Fiske show which will be the attraction at Connersville next Tuesday night.

The Grand theatre showed one of the best films Friday night ever witnessed in this city entitled "The Red Man's Way," it being the first time this subject was ever used. Miss Brown sang, "As Long as the World Rolls On." The same program will be repeated tonight.

It will seem like clapping hands with an old friend to greet "Quincy Adams Sawyer," that clean, wholesome and thoroughly entertaining play, when to comes to Rushville on next Tuesday night. The story, the characters, scenes and situations of the bucolic drama are so familiar now as to need no further description.

"Leah Kleschna," which Mrs. Fiske will present at the Auditorium in Connersville Tuesday evening, is first of all a fine play of absorbing plot, powerful climaxes, quick action and appealing heart interest. Contrary to the general idea prevalent, the play is not a complicated one, and easily followed, being a high class melodramatic detective story. But beyond that it has attracted wide attention as a study in criminology. It is in accord with the ideas of the great criminologists in the matter of the treatment of criminals. Paul Sylvaire, one of the leading characters in the play, advocates the use of moral suasion instead of imprisonment or other punishment with criminals. Leah, the girl thief, who is the central figure of his strong drama, is thus redeemed from the life to which she has been trained by her father. The theory of Sylvaire is that there is in every one a moral sense which if awakened and appealed to, must triumph over the sense of wrong. It is a well known fact that prisons do no succeed in preventing crime, and experiments conducted both here and abroad prove that freedom and an appeal to the moral sense accomplish far more in this direction. The point is whether we shall brand the criminal for life as a jailbird or make a good citizen of him or her by rousing his better nature and helping it to conquer the evil in him. A heart touching love story is weaved through the plot lines.

MRS. PAT CAMPBELL

Noted English Actress Pleases
With Her Repertory.

"MAGDA"—"HEDDA GABLER."

May Robson Appears Successfully as a Star In Her New Play, "The Rejuvenation of Mary"—The Drama
Has Bright Lines.

[From Our New York Dramatic Correspondent.]

Mrs. Patrick Campbell attracted large and fashionable audiences during her stay at the Lyric theater. Her repertory included "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "Magda," "Hedda Gabler" and "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith."

The critics praised her work in each role. Some of them hail her as the greatest Mrs. Tanqueray they have ever seen.

In "Hedda Gabler," the somber Ibsen play, Mrs. Campbell also did splendid work.

She has tremendous power in repose. No actress before the public today knows better how to make a vital scene strongly effective, and few are able to so completely dominate the scene through the sheer power of suggesting a purely mental struggle.

Especially is the role of Hedda suited to the fine qualities which Mrs. Campbell excels in rendering—the purring self complacency masking an alert, restless watchfulness, the velvet paw and the cruel claws beneath the velvet. From the domestic cat to the jungle tiger Mrs. Campbell exhibited all the phases in womanhood that we are accustomed to liken to the feline.

Contrasted with the hidden furies of his irritable wife, the calmly and unconsciously irritating Tesman is full of possibilities of humor which Mr. Kent was quick to seize upon.

In the intensely imaginative and fiercely passionate Eilert Lovberg Mr. Ben Webster similarly found an adequate outlet for his energetic and magnetic personality. He made all im-maiden aunt with a boisterous but well meaning nephew, whom she pulls out of scrape after scrape, she gave a stage picture of wonderful realism and humor. She was in turn acid, acidulous and rasping, strident of voice and incisive and, by an apparently logical reversion which never seemed in the least contradictory, was tender, cheerful, compassionate and womanly. She occupied much of the stage, and her lines for the most part were so- liloquies, but as often as she appeared she was welcome.

Obviously a number of the characters created by the author were intended to have a distinct individuality. There was in particular a maid of all work fashioned somewhat after the Miss Hazy of "Mrs. Wiggs" who might have stood out in stronger relief. The great fault was that the personification of the characters in the play had been entrusted to youthful amateurs whose ambition did not square with their ability. The ingenue in particular had a delivery more suited to the uttering of "prunes and prisms" than to the reading of lines purporting to represent human speech. As a paragon of priggishness she was perfect. Unfortunately the character was not in the least intended as such.

ANXIOUS WAGNER.

The First Performance of "Rienzi" at Dresden.

In Ludwig Frankenstein's Wagner year book Gustav Kietz tells this story in connection with the first performance of "Rienzi" at Dresden: "On the day of the first performance Wagner asked me to meet him in front of the theater after the box office had been opened, so that he could give me and my friend Schuster, the butcher, tickets for the performance. Wagner was in a state of great excitement, and when he gave me the two tickets Heine whispered to me, 'Take some one with good big hands with you.' He watched the people as they came toward the theater, and every time one went in he would make some remark to his wife which showed his satisfaction. I had to go within, but I shall never forget the childish joy of the composer when he saw groups enter the house and the disappointment when others passed the open doors. I thought of it even that evening when the enthusiasm was the greatest. How happy Wagner and his wife must have been at the following two performances, when the house was so filled that even his relatives, who had come to Dresden for that purpose, could not be admitted to the theater!"

He Knew the Step:

A young constable arrived in a certain borough in Scotland and in the course of duty found it essential to apprehend a very old offender. Arrived at the police station, he ushered him into the cells with the comment, "Mind the step."
"Gae awa', man," said the prisoner, with contempt. "I kent the step afore ye was born."—Dundee Advertiser.

GREAT SILIKO SOLD.

Trotting Stallion Brought $35,000, It Is Reported.

NOW GOES TO ENGLAND.

Career of the Four-year-old That Has Been Looked on as a Future World Beater—He Has Record of 2:11 1/4. Louis Winans His New Owner.

According to a Lexington (Ky.) dispatch, the great four-year-old trotting stallion Siliko has been sold by Joseph and Edward Madden, sons of John E. Madden, to George H. Ketcham of Toledo, the former owner of the champion stallion Cresceus, 2:02 1/4, for a price reported to be in the neighborhood of $35,000. The deal was closed for the account of Louis Winans of England, and the horse has been shipped to Detroit, from which point he will be exported to England.

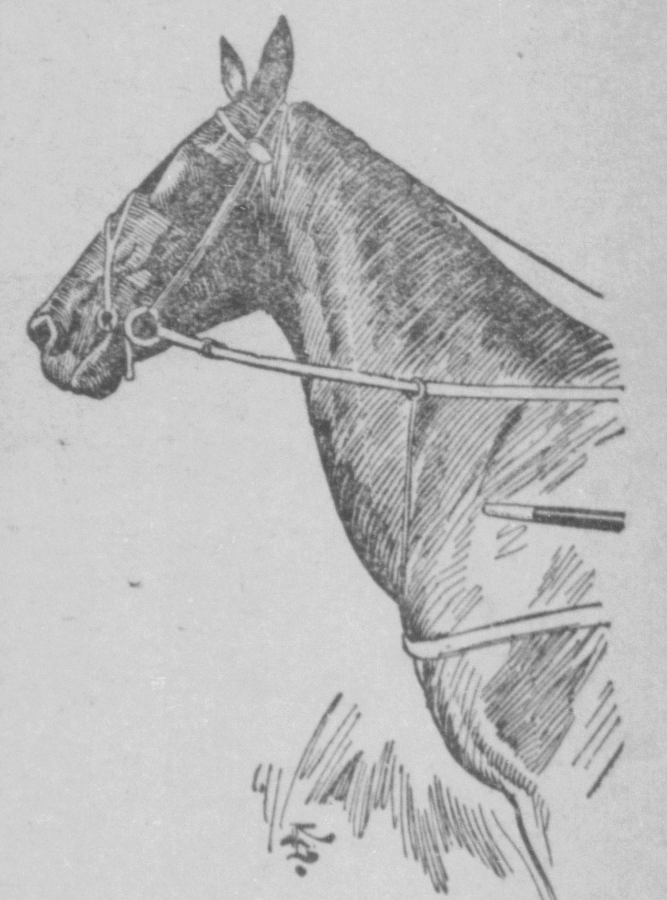

The conclusion of the sale should not cause any surprise to horsemen, as the report that negotiations were pending between the owners and Mr. Ketcham had been previously published during the Columbus grand circuit meeting. In fact, while Trainer Knap McCarthy was playing to the stand at Lexington with the announced purpose of lowering the world's four-year-old stallion record of 2:05 1/4 several horsemen believed that the fast trotter was already sold for export.

Siliko was by the Walnut Hall farm's premier stallion Moko and out of the brood mare Silcon, 2:13 1/2, a daughter of Wilton, 2:19 1/2, thus representing two of the best trotting lines. He was bred by Clem Beachey, Jr., the well known Lexington trainer, and from early colthood showed speed enough to be looked upon as one of the coming champion youngsters and stake horses, particularly because he was out of a mare which in her racing days had showed great speed as a two-year-old.

In his yearling form he was broken by Trainer Clem Beachey, who, after giving the youngster a good and proper schooling, which Clem only knows how to do to the best advantage, he sold him as a two-year-old to Brook Curry and the late Charles Marvin. As the property of the two gentlemen Siliko was started in the Lexington stake for two-year-olds in 1905 and won the event, gaining a record of 2:17 1/2, while earlier during the Lexington meeting of that year he captured third money in the two-year-old division of the Kentucky Futurity.

In the following winter Mr. Madden bought the colt, then a three-year-old, for $4,000 and turned him over to SILIKO, 2:11 1/4, STALLION, SOLD FOR $35,000. Trainer McCarthy for preparation for the big futurity of 1906. He was nursed carefully for the big youngster stake, and it is now a matter of history how the son of Moko and Silcon captured the biggest end of the rich stake at Lexington after an accident and gained a record of 2:11 1/4, which is his record still, and thus he is eligible to the 2:12 class.

He was extensively entered in all the big stakes of the racing season just closed, but neither won a race nor a heat, although he won several short end moneys from Detroit down to Columbus.

Early during the past spring it was generally reported that Mr. Madden's only ambition was to win the Transylvania stake, the feature event at Lexington, thus equaling the record of only another horse who had won the big futurity and the Transylvania—namely, Borama. The way McCarthy handled Siliko throughout the grand circuit aroused much criticism, but horsemen overlooked it, believing that the colt was being saved for the Lexington event.

When it was announced at Columbus that the trotter would not start as planned in the Transylvania, the decision aroused much comment, and the withdrawal was assigned to a prospective sale, which now proves as reported at the time.

Jones In Jail at Logansport
Had a Very Fertile Imagination.

HELD ON FORGERY CHARGE

It Is Alleged That He Left a Trail of Bad Checks Every Place
He Went.

Came to Grief When He Bought
Wedding Outfit With Alleged Bad Paper.

Logansport, Ind., Nov. 30.—A. C. Jones, thirty-five years old, residence unknown, is under arrest and in jail here, charged with forgery. He is alleged to have deposited a draft on the First National bank at Fort Wayne for $2,200, with the bank at Pence, receiving for it a certificate of deposit for the same amount. He then went to Hoopeston, Ill., bought a residence and gave a check for $6,000. He also bought a fur overcoat for $1,000, paying with a check. Both checks are said to be forgeries.

In the meantime he became engaged to a prominent Rossville (Ill.) young woman and obtained her promise to marry him at an early day. He went to Danville to fit up a home, and he bought furniture from Zeenes & Sandusky with a lavish hand, the best the house afforded. He gave the firm a check for $2,100, which was found to be a forgery when the Pence bank was notified. He was arrested at the home of his fiancée, Miss Thompson, at Rossville. The Indiana authorities thought their case was better than the case in Illinois, and Jones was sent to Logansport. Jones posed as absolute heir to the Gifford estate in Indiana, and he boasted that he was worth millions and that he owned lands in Jasper county amounting to 58,000 acres. Nothing of Jones's place of residence is known to the authorities here. If not convicted in Indiana he will be taken back to Danville to stand trial for forgery.

FARMERS FIGHT IN ROADWAY

Frank McCoy Fatally Shot and His Brother Wounded by Ed W. Ford.

Nashville, Ind., Nov. 30.—Edward Ford shot and fatally wounded Frank McCoy and seriously wounded John McCoy, his brother. The three men met in a country road near Brummitt's creek on their way to attend a wood-chopping on the Willard Pauley farm, and a quarrel arose over some land. There had been bad blood previously among them.

In the encounter Ford used his revolver, sending a bullet into Frank McCoy's body and inflicting an injury which physicians report will terminate fatally. John McCoy attempted to protect his brother, and he was severely wounded.

After the shooting Ford surrendered to the sheriff of this county, but as the shooting occurred across the line he was transferred to the custody of the Monroe county officials. All the principals in the affray are farmers. Frank McCoy is thirty years old and the head of a family.

Three Boys and Their Guns.

Metamora, Ind., Nov. 30.—As the result of a crowd of hunters all shooting at one rabbit, one man will lose the sight of one eye and another man is suffering from serious injuries in the face. A party of young men was hunting in the woods, three miles south of Metamora. A rabbit was sighted by all of them and they all took aim at once. Clarence Jackson, twenty-seven years old, was shot in the face and eye from the gun in the hands of Jackson Sample. At the same instant a shot from another gun in the crowd struck the face of Sample and a serious wound was made in the cheek. The men were sixty feet from the guns, and this fact accounts for the injuries not being more serious.

No Official Report Yet.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Nov. 30.—The young man who was killed here Wednesday night by George Harrod, night operator at the Big Four railway station, because Harrod thought he was going to be robbed, has been identified as Harry McClain, who lived near Mt. Pleasant, Parke county. The coroner and prosecuting attorney are not yet ready to make report. A special session of the grand jury will be called to consider the case.

Echo of Toy Pistol Sale.

Seymour, Ind., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Mary Schumback has brought suit against Joseph Hibner, proprietor of a grocery and notion store, for $500 damages, alleging that he sold her eleven-year-old son a toy pistol and a box of blank cartridges. While experimenting with his purchase the boy shot himself in the hand to his serious injury. The defendant has already paid a fine for selling the toy.

Tramp Courtied Death.

Brazil, Ind., Nov. 30.—A tramp whose name and residence are unknown was killed by a fast eastbound passenger train on the Big Four railroad at Perth, this county. The man was standing on the track and made no effort to get out of the way of the approaching train. The body was ground to pieces.

AN IMPRISONED FACULTY.

College Graduates in Stripes Take Charge of New Instruction System.

The departure for Auburn, N. Y., a few days ago of Philetus M. Helfer closes a chapter of much interest in educational work being done under state auspices for convicts in New York's penal institutions, says an Ossining special dispatch to the New York Times. Mr. Helfer has introduced among the 1,200 or more prisoners a very complete educational course, ranking rather above the grammar grades and below the high school courses in the higher limits.

It was surmised that there would be some difficulty in finding a willing and competent corps of instructors among the prisoners, inasmuch as several educated ones who were approached declined on the ground that it would require too much mental refurbishing to make themselves competent teachers of those needing the more elementary instruction. A faculty of nine members was finally obtained, and it is noteworthy that all are college graduates. The dean of the faculty is a Cambridge (England) man, while one of the members is an Oxford man. Columbia has three representatives, Cornell one, and smaller colleges account for others in their catalogues. Both the Cambridge and Oxford men are serving sentences for forgery, a variety of crime which seems to appeal to the educated. Others of the faculty are serving time for similar offenses.

Forgery has a close rival in perjury, it is stated, and in the consultations with prisoners preliminary to the establishment of the new educational features the greatest surprise was expressed by New York city convicts that more prominent offenders in this respect had not been sent up from the metropolis.

"It was an everyday affair in our business," said one man, "to make affidavit to false returns. I never gave it a second thought, and I knew others did not. It was simply part of the day's work."

EMORY'S RUSSIAN VICTORY.

How One of Admiral Evans' Fleet
Commanders Disposed of a Duel.

When Rear Admiral William H. Emory, who accompanies Rear Admiral Evans' great fleet of sixteen battleships to the Pacific, was attached to the China station in command of a ship he gave a dinner to the officers of a Russian vessel in the harbor. One of the young Russians grossly insulted a paymaster, new in the service, on board the American ship. The young American officers insisted that the paymaster must challenge the Russian to a duel, and the insulted man was ready to fight.

Captain Emory, however, heard of the proposed affair and took the matter into his own hands. He insisted that the Russian captain send the offending officer aboard the American ship to make a public apology. The Russian captain thought a written apology would do. Emory then sent the Russian captain a letter which was practically a challenge to personal combat. The Russian capitulated, sending his subordinate aboard to apologize.

DOMINIE CAR CONDUCTORS.

Four College Professors Also Working as Registers of Fares.

The Pittsburgh Railway company recently received applications from twenty-five college graduates, four college professors and two ministers for employment, says a Pittsburgh special dispatch to the New York Times. The graduates could get nothing else to do, the professors had lost their positions and could find no employment as teachers, and the ministers are young men who have so far failed to be assigned to churches.

They received positions, and all preferred the rear end of the car to a job as motorman. "The ministers particularly are doing well," said an official. "One of them has a car which passes through the worst part of the city after midnight. The other night a crowd of toughs started a fight, but the minister-conductor restored order before any one was hurt."

Ice Cream For Ocean Liners.

With the steadily increasing demand for American made ice cream en route to and from the orient, an industry has sprung up in California which furnishes to nearly all the ships of the transpacific lines ice cream in large blocks, sufficient in quantity and frozen solidity to last the entire trip to Hongkong and back to San Francisco again, says Popular Mechanics. To cater to this demand a plant has been constructed in which the ice cream is frozen without the aid of ice applied in the usual way. The substitute is cold brine, which circulates around the freezing tanks after coming into contact with ammonia pipes. By this process ice cream can be turned out at the rate of a batch every eight minutes. The capacity of the plant is 1,000 gallons per day.

International Postage Stamp.

What is practically an international postage stamp has recently been issued by the postoffice department in the shape of an "international reply coupon," which can be exchanged at any postoffice in the universal postal union for one valued at 25 centimes or its equivalent, says the New York Herald. By this arrangement it is possible for the first time to send postage for a reply to a correspondent in a foreign country. A correspondent may exchange the coupon for stamps equal in value to a five cent United States stamp in practically every country in the world except China and Russia.

DRUCE CASE HISTORY

Remarkable Disappearance of the Duke of Portland.

LIVED AN ECCENTRIC LIFE.

British Nobleman's Daily Movements
Elaborately Concealed For Ten Years.
Object of Criminal Case on Trial Is to Have Druce's Grave Opened.

On looking up the published matter on the Druce-Portland claim case, which is being tried at London, I was surprised to find how on first sight so many complicated facts were combined in the Druce case as to bear their most probable explanation only in one way, writes a London correspondent of the New York Post. Gradually I saw built up before my eyes one of the most extraordinary and romantic family tangles revolving around a man who from his position and eccentricities must be regarded as a historic freak hardly less remarkable than the Marquis of Casanova or the Duc de Lauzun. I am inclined to regret that the course of evidence in the present trial tends to destroy the probability that this ingenious figment can be maintained. But of that anon. For the present it is interesting to consider the curious history of the fifth Duke of Portland as presented by one who claims to be his grandson and heir to his title and estates.

The great wealth of the family, drawn mostly from ever increasing London rents, has always given them important political influence, but in the time of the fifth duke his younger brother, Lord George Bentinck, was regarded as the leader of the country gentlemen of England and the champion of the protectionists against Sir Robert Peel and the free traders.

It was therefore natural that his elder brother, the duke, as I shall call him henceforward, should be a great magnate, whose movements would naturally be followed by hundreds of those who were dependent on him or looked up to him in some way. Nevertheless it is a matter of record that the life of the duke was eccentric to a degree and his private habits so skillfully concealed that no evidence has yet been successfully brought forward by his acknowledged heirs which has upset the almost absurd allegations of the present claimant.

In 1816 Lord John Bentinck, as he then was, a younger son of sixteen, instead of being at Eton or Harrow, Oxford or Cambridge, mysteriously disappeared for four years until 1820. The only record of this sprig of nobility during the period is an honorary military appointment in 1818, which he seems to have fulfilled by one public appearance about a year later. This seems to have led to his return to society, where he shortly became conspicuous, first, owing to his succession through the death of his elder brother as Marquis of Titchfield to the reversion of the dukedom; second, by some remarkable exploits on the turf. For the next fifteen years he ran a very successful racing partnership with two brothers, Lord George Bentinck being one. The three brothers owned a stud of horses in common, racing under the name of "Mr. Bowes," which before it was closed in 1835 is reported to have yielded them all an immense amount of profit.

The year 1835 was marked by the second disappearance of our hero, and, public man as he must have been after his racing successes, scarcely anything was known of him for nearly twenty years. Two important recorded events took place. The first was his quarrel with his brother, Lord George Bentinck, in 1848 over a lady identified as Annie May Berkeley, reputed to be the daughter of the fifth Earl of Berkeley by a disputed marriage. This quarrel reached the point of blows, one of which, as the story runs, was the cause of the death of Lord George in the height of his political campaign against Sir Robert Peel. The second was his succession in 1854 to the dukedom. From this time onward follows the most romantic portion of the duke's career. For ten years his daily movements were elaborately concealed. Evidently he was leading one if not two double lives with the most persevering devotion to intrigue. No pleasures could possibly have been sufficient reward for the pains he took to conceal his movements.

Under these circumstances it was natural that every kind of rumor and report should surround him. But some of his immediate dependents may be looked upon as reliable witnesses negatively to his movements. The fact is that none of them, however intimately associated with him, can prove any regular residence or existence for him as duke. His valet's account is one mysterious record of appearances and disappearances. Whether in London or at Welbeck he was mysteriously concealed for days in his private apartments, communicating with his servants only by note. Every day an absurd performance was carried on between Welbeck and his London house. His carriage left in the evening tightly closed, was placed on a railway truck either at Worksop or London and was conveyed through to the other end by train and horses without inspection as to whether it was empty or not. The same procedure was carried on at Harcourt House, where secret passages took him in and out from his rooms without even the knowledge of his valet. No one of his servants during his disappearance could tell for certain whether he was in London or at Welbeck.

The year 1864 was the final date of his metamorphosis. From that time on he lived as duke officially at Welbeck, and, though he remained a recluse until 1879, there is no reason to suppose that he carried on another life elsewhere. He appears to have occupied himself, perhaps with a view to insuring concealment, with those enormous underground works which are the chief object of interest to all visitors at Welbeck abbey.

The suggestion of the present claimant is that his grandfather, Thomas Charles Druce, lived a life with eccentric gaps corresponding with the most minute fidelity with the known vagaries of the duke. He attempts to establish the identity of the two men by witnesses with whom I cannot deal in the limits of this article. Old Druce, the claimant's grandfather, appeared first in 1816 as a suitor to an heiress of great beauty in Bury St. Edmunds. This lady, Miss Crickmer, he married, and for four years they resided together and had a family of two children. After four years, having dissipated her fortune and being tired of a draper's shop, he disappeared, leaving her and her children in penury.

This is supposed to be the time when the duke returned to the turf, and in 1835, when he again disappeared, having acquired a considerable sum of money. I. C. Druce revives and appears in London. He will have nothing to do with his former wife beyond giving her an allowance, but he provides for his son and daughter and starts a new life of commerce. Having disappeared without a penny in 1820, Druce has £100,000, with which he opens the Baker street bazaar and develops it into a successful commercial enterprise.

The years 1854 to 1864 are the most interesting in the history of old Druce, as they are in that of the duke. There is the same tale of his unapproachable demeanor, of mysterious disappearances, of elaborate disguises and very untradesmanlike luxury. After the death of his second wife he married again, this time an Annie May Berkeley mentioned above, with whom he had been living for years. By her he had one illegitimate and one legitimate son, Herbert Druce. Finally he died in 1864, leaving his very considerable property to the second family.

The present claimant, George Holmby Druce, the eldest son of the eldest son of the first marriage, attempts to prove that the supposed death of I. C. Druce in 1864 was a fictitious ceremony, employed by the late Duke of Portland to escape from the embarrassments of his double life and acquiesced in by his second family owing to the bribe of the large property devolving by will in the shape of the Baker street bazaar. The whole question turns on the situation inside the Druce vault at Highgate as to whether the coffin there contains a body or a roll of lead.

Litigation thus far has been carried on by a company which speculates on the value of the Druce claims to property supposed to be worth £16,000,000. An order was obtained from a civil court to search the grave, but this order was resisted by Herbert Druce as legal heir, and no power exists in England to compel disturbance of a grave except in cases where criminal issues are involved.

This is the origin of the present proceedings, which are carried forward from Friday to Friday and may last for weeks. The plaintiff is bringing a charge of perjury against Herbert Druce with the hope that if he can establish a prima facie argument for further investigation the magistrate will order the opening of the vault. It is a skillful conversion of a civil issue into a criminal one. At present the fresh evidence brought forward by the prosecution is not very convincing, but there seems so much genuine doubt as to the chief facts in dispute that there is some considerable part of the public hoping that the mystery will be finally settled by an order to investigate the condition of the grave. The case for the plaintiff has not so far been strengthened during the present proceedings, so no one knows how it may turn out. But it seems pretty widely acknowledged in the clubs that the representatives of the present holders of the Portland estates, divided between Lord Howard de Walden and the present duke, are by no means free from uneasiness. There remains a suspicion that, even if nothing comes of the Druce claims, diving into the past life of the fifth duke is a dangerous pastime for his heirs.

Marking an Old Trail.

The work of marking the line of the Santa Fe trail in Kansas has been completed, says the Kansas City Journal. The Daughters of the American Revolution have placed ninety-five monuments along the route of the trail, at least one in every county through which the trail passed. These monuments were made of Oklahoma granite and contained a suitable inscription to show the purpose. The state and the Daughters of the American Revolution furnished the money to buy and have the monuments dressed. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road hauled them free, and the county organizations had them placed in the proper positions. The Daughters of the American Revolution in Colorado are now at work placing similar monuments to those used in Kansas along the trail in Colorado.

Hunting In the Curriculum.

In accordance with a suggestion made at the annual meeting of the Bedale hunt a few days ago the Bedale hounds met recently near a village school in Yorkshire, England, the object being, says the Yorkshire Post, to give the children an object lesson in hunting and to inspire in their minds a respect and regard for both hounds and hunters.

MONEY TALK!

Roosevelt Says: "There is no particle of risk involved in letting business take its natural course and the people can help themselves and the country most by putting back into active circulation the money they are hoarding."
Bryan says: "The man who will draw his money out of the bank now when he does not need it, is in the same class as the man who would refuse to aid his country in time of war."
